Those brave 'Injuns' came this-a-way!

Come gather around the tribal fires as we ancients speak about our warriors of the Calumet tribe.

Ugh! The year was 1985, a time of great harvest for the Calumet Warriors. Seeds of knowledge were sown, and brave contests were held to test members of the tribe.

On November 30, 1984, the braves gathered together and dressed in their war paint to call out the praises of the mighty Warriors of the heap big court. Chief Traicoff openhunting season ed his against Chicago Saint lames.

dian Day.

4 Current Events

Outside news travels to the tribe

The big chiefs in Washington held their heap big conventions in 1984. The Republican incumbents President Ronald Reagan and Vice President George Bush were re-elected.

Another first in the country's history resulted when Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale chose a woman, Geraldine Ferraro, as his running mate.

On the national scene space shuttles were launched and things "heated up" in South America.

In sports the fans in Northwest

Indiana grew excited about Chicago teams. Bears' running back Walter Payton broke Jim Brown's rushing record. Cub fans could not contain their excitement when the team finally won a national League Eastern Division.

Olympic competition was held in the winter and summer of 1984. During the winter contests, the U.S. captured four gold and four silver medals. In the Los Angeles summer games, the U.S. won 83 gold medals, 61 silver and 30 bronze.

Tracking your way is half the fun

Yes, on some days it is heap big problem just getting to school. Watch the signs along the way and follow the trail as you track your way to Warrior Country.

Some mornings are beautiful, and all of the little braves wish to spend their time enjoying nature. Some mornings are cold and blistery. It is heap big decision over whether to get out from under warm blanket.

When the alarm rings, some Warriors raise one heavy eyelid and then close it again. Other braves jump into their moccasins and rush out to catch their "big vellow steed."

Any brave who is late, or has missed a day of tribal instruction, must have a smoke signal note from home to excuse his absence. Without this excuse, the tribal elders will believe that you are an "Indian Ditcher."

No matter how you track your way to school, keeping on the trail and getting there is half the fun. a: Senior Greg Keefer rides his bicycle to school on a cold day.

b: Freshmen Mae Stewart and Willie Collins rush for their first hour class.

We stack up!: activities

Many brave Warriors left their tepees for ceremonial traditions. The sounds of pounding drums and war whoops echoed across the field at Homecoming. Members of the tribe gathered to boost and honor the braves during Spirit Week.

The spirits were alive when our fellow tribesmen acted out "Host to a Ghost" in the fall. Senior members of the tribe were heap funny in "No More Homework."

Many believe that Santa Claus is not part of the Indian tradition. Mmm, the fat paleface is not an elf, but the "Great Spirit of the White North." To celebrate his visit, warriors gathered for the annual turnabout at Christmastime.

In the spring seniors were called together for graduation. Come line up little brave and collect those one little, two little, three little diplomas.

Frenzied fans yell, boost CHS spirit

In front of a red and white confetti throwing crowd, CHS' War-riors lost to Horace Mann 2-14 on September 21 at the annual Homecoming game.

Homecoming festivities includ-ed dress-up days, a parade, a revue and a dance following the game.

Senior Alena Hernandez was crowned Queen at halftime ceremonies. Senior Jesse Smith was voted Mr. Football by the student body. Both royal winners received pen and pencil sets from the Student Council.

Due to an early Homecoming game date, the Council did not judge the floats.

Students perform 'haunting' comedy

In the fall CHS' Drama Department presented the play, "Host to a Ghost." The production was a mystery/comedy about a ghost who came back to haunt the Roberts' family during the Cedar Crest Centennial.

The play was performed in the

CHS auditorium on November 16 and 17 at 7:30 p.m.

The proceeds made from the play were used to pay for a deficit in the play production fund. Extra profits were added to the fund to pay for future productions.

Signing party celebrates book's arrival

Memories of the past year were received on September 10 when the CHS Chieftain '84 was distributed. The '84 Chieftain. entitled "Club Met, Traveling First Class," was the main topic of discussion as graduates and underclassmen gathered to receive their yearbooks at the annual book signing party held in the Calumet High School foyer.

Yearbooks were distributed during both lunch hours, from September 11 to September 14.

The sales campaign in the fall of 1983 produced approximately 445 books. The proceeds helped to pay for the 176-page book, which contained twelve pages of senior color and eight pages of activity color.

Week cites special students, teachers

Calumet's National Education Week was held from November 13 to 16. Activities during the week were sponsored by the Calumet Student Council.

The Council recognized the leaders of clubs and organizations with ribbons on Tuesday. On Wednesday top students in individual classrooms were awarded ribbons by their teachers. Also on Wednesday parents were invited for a visit during the school day.

Thursday was teacher and student exchange day. Students taught lessons and exchanged places with members of the administration and faculty. On Friday students recognized their favorite teachers for the 1984-85 school year. The teachers selected were Miss Pauline Yatsko and Mr. Jerry Tauber, mathematics instructors.

'Cyclone Sally' stirs up laughter

Calumet's annual spring play, "Cyclone Sally," was held in the school auditorium on March 29 and 30. The production was under the direction of Mr. Paul Borlick, drama instructor.

The comedy was about a poor girl who sold cabbages to earn extra money. The character leased her land from a man who hated the sight of cabbages. This man offered a marriage proposal after he realized that she inherited one million dollars from her father. During the course of the play they fell in love.

The three act play was sponsored by the CHS Drama Department. Sophomore David Gonzales served as stage manager for the production. Sets were constructed by drama classes.

Citing the 'best' in students, teachers

Honoring the finest in education, Honor Society inducted new members during the spring, and Miss Johnnie McCray, faculty member, was named an Outstanding teacher.

National Honor Society inducted 22 new members on April 1 in the CHS auditorium. Members were chosen by grade point averages and excellence in the areas of character and leadership. The Sophomore Class provided refreshments following the ceremonies.

Miss Johnnie McCray was honored as an outstanding high school teacher by the Inland Steel-Ryerson Foundation. The English teacher was awarded a plaque, a $250 check, and a recognition dinner. The dinner, honoring 22 teachers in area schools, was held at Teibel's restaurant on May 3. Miss Mc-Cray was chosen by a committee of five faculty members.

We Stack Up!: Academics

Listen, papooses, tribal in mind, body and spirit. The elders of the tribe have designed cirricula hoping the path to learning.

A wise brave learns early to make peace treaty with the teacher. While in class, remember to keep your nose to the grindstone and your eagle eye on your own paper!

Ugh! We seek to make tests will make you strong you well-rounded braves. You must learn to read the smoke signals, to calculate the time of the seasons, and to keep your moccasins on to speak and sing the praises of your spirit.

Just as we plant the maize, hoping to harvest a bountiful crop, we seek to sow the seeds of knowledge which will reap a crop of wise warriors.

Learnin' skills in language

Recognizing and decoding language is an essential element in the learning process. Knowing a foreign language and increasing skills in the English language was a top priority at Calumet.

Students were offered four year programs in both Spanish and French. Spanish students conducted skit presentations in class. Members of both French and Spanish classes attended

In Miss Johnnie McCray's senior English classes, students delivered speeches based on Chaucer's work, "Canterbury Tales." The winners of the best tales, seniors Nancy Lambert and Connie Colson, both won tickets to the Spaghetti Supper, just as Chaucer's characters received a dinner.

Science gets new look

With fresh emphasis on mathematics and science, CHS' departments were active in renovation and competition.

Nine students traveled to compete in a computer contest at Indiana University Northwest on February 19. The group, spon-sored by Mr. Randy Harkabus, computer instructor, finished fourth out of 10 area schools. Five students also attended a calculator contest on March 9. Participants in the Mathematics Department also competed in a regional math contest on April 27.

The Science Department also received a "face lift" in 1984. New labs were installed in five rooms. The preparation rooms were also expanded in biology, chemistry and general science.

Students study past, present

Learning the rudiments of government, the intricacies of economics, or the events of history were covered in courses in the social science area.

Sophomores were required to complete one semester of world civilization. During their junior year, students were required to finish one year of U.S. history. Senior graduation requirements mandated that all grads complete one semester of government, and one semester of economics.

Electives were available in teens and law, psychology and sociology.

- a: During sixth hour U.S. history class, Mr. Robert Maginot discusses an assignment with students. b: Mr. Robert O'Conner lectures to his sixth hour
- U.S. history class. c: Making-up a U.S. history assignment, junior

- f: Juniors Chris Woodling and Mike Wilburn take notes on the novel, "The Jungle," in Mr. John Tsangaris' U.S. history class.
- g: Students in Mr. William Miller's sixth hou economics class work on review questions.

Sorting out 'fine details'

How may one explore the "finer" things in life? Perhaps by following a course of study in the fine arts area. CHS offered classes in music, drama and art.

"Tuning" one's senses in music, students elected to pursue classes in band and chorus. Members of the classes conducted concerts in the winter and the spring.

Drama classes presented a Homecoming Revue in the fall. Other class projects included pantomimes and short skits.

Another way of displaying the fine arts was by mastering skills in art class. Projects included sketching a portrait or molding clay. A few Calumet subemitted art work to Purdue Calumet for a weekend or judging in arts and science. Mr. Roy Wilson, an art teacher for twenty-eight years, retired midterm. Taking his place was Mrs. Nancw Whitcomb.

Area stresses practical arts

Common sense and training helped students to complete projects in the practical arts curriculum.

Those pursuing courses in home economics studied the basics of foods and sewing. More advanced courses found students completing projects in needlepoint, crocheting and cake decorating.

Courses in industrial arts were offered in woods, metal, printing, drafting and welding. Advanced areas required projects completed such as gun racks, blueprints for homes, and printing the school newspaper and the Grissom Elementary year-book. Members of graphic arts class also traveled to Chicago in April for an industry trade fair.

a: Seniors Daniele Feeler and Chris Day complete projects in Miss Frieda Gutzmann's third hour handicrafts class.

b: Junior Betsy Joseph gives an apple to Mrs. Joyce Weakland on Teacher Appreciation Day during National Education Week

c: Making a screwdriver, sophomore Alan Craven uses a engine lathe in third hour woodshop.

d: Mr. Michael Vass and senior Jeff Miller review

e: Honored by Miss Frieda Gutzmann, senior Lolita Lofton accepts an Outstanding Student Award in her sixth hour class.

f: During the three hour vocational course in graphic arts, seniors Kathleen Nelson and Karen Edwards design a layout.

CHSers seek business sense

For students who wished a good head start on a career a variety of courses were offered in the Business Department.

Classes in typing and general business were available to first year students. Advanced courses were offered in business machines and Shorthand I and II.

Intensive Lab, a special two hour class, was pursued by students seeking a career in business. The course, taught by Miss Eva Simic, simulated the office work situation.

- a: Miss Eva Simic assists seniors Wendy Yarbrough and Tammy Campbell with their daily assignment.
- b: In sixth hour general business class, Mr. Tom Dakich shows Tammy Austin an article in the newspaper.
- c: Frances Vibanco, senior, completes her assign-
- ment in third hour typing class. d: Working on an assignment, junior Mike Bridges
- finishes a timed writing in Mrs. Dorothy Long's third hour typing class.

Centers serve student needs

Read any good books, or soft-ware lately? Well, any student who wished to take advantage of special centers at Calumet were directed toward the reading lab, library, or the computer lab.

The reading lab, located in Room 209, was directed by Mrs. Linda Demo. Courses were provided in developmental and speed reading. Students were selected for the lab by their English instructors.

Students utilized library facilities on an individual and classroom basis. CHSers were encouraged to patronize the library, directed by Mr. John Talias, for classroom assignments and pleasure reading.

CHS' computer lab was directed by Mrs. Joan Ralph. The room, equipped with 22 Apple II computers, was utilized by students in every area of CHS curriculum.

- a: Seniors Joann Vines and Dawn White trade places with Mr. John Talias, librarian, during National Education Week.
- b: Expanding his knowledge, senior Louis Hopkins works with an Apple II in the computer
- c: Sophomore Jamie Boyles reviews a paperback in reading lab.
- d: In a quiet corner of the school library, freshman
- Orval Voorhies works on an assignment.

Staying fit mind, body

Keeping the body, as well as the mind, in top condition was of concern to members of the Health and Physical Education Departments.

During the year, students studied the techniques of Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) in health classes. Paramedics from the Red Cross demonstrated and tested students on the procedure.

Physical education classes included courses of study in team and life sports.

Drivers' education classes were offered to sophomores. Students were required to complete work in the classroom, on the simulators and in the automobile.

d: Junior Vicky Navejar uses weights for conditioning in Miss Robyn Payne's sixth hour physical education class.

e: Mr. Stan Surdy, physical education instructor, gives direction to freshman Rob Cantu during sixth hour physical education class.

We Stack Up!: Clubs

Around the campfire, councils begin to gather to discuss issues of importance to their members. Before the dancing fire, many tribe councils conduct powwows.

The Calumet tribe held elections in the spring to choose braves who would serve on the Student Council. Warriors with great wisdom were selected for Honor Society and Quill and Scroll. Learning to speak with foreign tongues, some CHS braves joined language clubs to study the customs of people who live beyond the great mountains and distant waters.

Many Calumet braves were active in service and pep organizations. Members of these councils helped others and chanted the praises of our teams when they took to the warpath.

Acquiring skills for the betterment of the tribe, some warriors joined vocational clubs. These braves make big effort to prepare themselves for future occupations.

Yes, many tribesmen banded together in organizations to make powwows of friendship.

Societies add

new members

National Honor Society inducted 22 new members on April 1. The organization sold candy during the lunch hours. A new project presented this year by the organization was the distribution of Honor Roll ribbons to students receiving all A's and B's during each grading period.

Quill & Scroll, an international honorary for high school journalists, inducted six members at the semester. To be a member of the group, a student must have a B average, be a junior or senior, be currently on a journalism staff and be recommended by the journalism adviser.

The second annual Journalism Awards Picnic on May 28 was sponsored by the organization.

Council spreds student spirit

Who put the spirit in Spirit Week? Who put the celebration in National Education Week? Student Council, under the guidance of Miss Pauline Yatsko, sponsored a variety of activities during the year.

Student Council members spred joy of the holiday as they decorated the halls for Christmas.

During the school year, the group collected money for the needy and raised funds for the restoration of the Statue of Liberty.

OEA, ICT plan projects

Honoring their employers, Office Education Association (OEA) and Industrial Cooperative Training (ICT) gathered with other clubs in the spring for the Vocational Banquet.

OEA participated in several fund raising projects during the year to finance their trips to contests. The group sold M&M's, Christmas kits, posters, and carnations for Valentine's Day. The group held a Spaghetti Supper and a faculty-parent Christmas Party. IČT delivered the annual Thanksgiving and Christmas food baskets to needy area families. The group participated in the project with C-Teens.

Members of the group participated in regional and state contests. Senior Robert Cox was awarded the "Outstanding Industrial Cooperative Training Student" at the Senior Banquet.

C-Teens aids needy families

As a charitable organization, C-Teens conducted projects during the year to help others.

C-Teens sold Christmas items and thermometers during the school year. The organization distributed Halloween treat bags and Easter treats to the Lake Ridge headstart children.

Members provided Thanksgiving and Christmas food boxes for area needy families. The group also donated to the Black Oak Food Pantry.

Organization members traveled on May 18 to Great America for a spring outing.

Music makers hold concerts

While some students were passing notes in class, others were concentrating on the type of "note" which emerges from musical instruments.

CHS Band members participated in concerts, pep sessions, games and parades. The group marched in the Popcorn Festival in Valparaiso during the month of September. The group also performed at the Hessville Little Red School House, placing first in the competition. At the Merrillville 4th of July parade, Calumet placed second.

Seniors Alena Hernandez and Ann Marie Merritt were selected to participate in the Northwest Indiana All-Star Band in Valparaiso. Senior Jake Ward was nominated for the McDonald's All-Star Band.

The Chorus at Calumet sold stuffed animals, stationary, and grapefruits and oranges. The organization performed in a Christmas and spring concert and were participants in the regional and state contests during the year.

Groups cheer for spirit!

Cheering on the team is not confined to only one group at CHS. Promoting team spirit was the business of the Junior Varsity Cheerleaders, Warriorettes and Lettergirls.

The J.V. Cheerleaders practiced after school and sold items to promote spirit during Homecoming and sectional weeks.

CHS' Lettergirls were present in the cheering block during all home games to urge on the Warriors during football and basketball seasons.

Warriorettes, CHS' pom pon squad, performed at game halfitmes and at the Band Christmas Concert. The group also marched in area parades. The organization met to practice during sixth hour and after school.

We Stack Up!: Sports

Calumet's heap brave Warriors met with other tribes in the area to prove their honor on the field of battle.

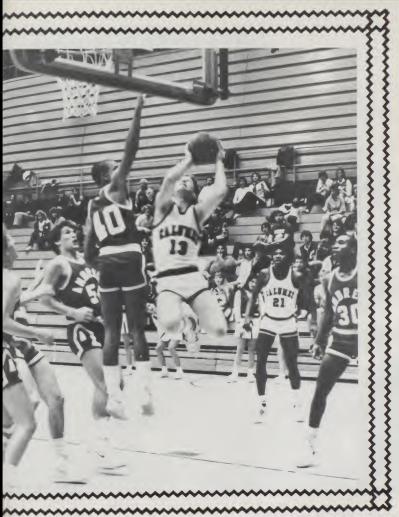

Led by Big Chiefs Lindinger, Traicoff, Starewicz, Stigall and Sopko, our mighty warriors did battle in contests of football, basketball, swimming, wrestling and track. The women of the tribe were also brave in their pursuits.

Not so many moons past, Chiefs Baird and Payne proved that other tribes often speak with forked tongues about their volleyball and basketball strengths.

Yes, little papooses, our tribe has shown great might whenever they have put on their warpaint and yelled, "scalp 'em!" Like the strong oak and the straight arrow, our braves have stood tall on the warpath.

We Stack Up!: Advertisements

Often we go to the trading post to swap our beads, skins and blankets for Izod skirts, Levi's and $40 Nike moccasins. Yes, our braves want to be "in" with records and tapes and with tribal chants by "Van Halen," "Madonna," "Prince," "Chicago" and Cyndi Lauper.

Braves gathered at local movie houses to see big images dance across the screen like "Ghostbusters," "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" and "Gremlins." In the comfort of their own tepees, members of the Calumet tribe followed visions of videos on "MTV," "Friday Night Videos," "Music Video 60" and "Rock on Chicago."

Following the straight and 'arrow'

The tribal fires have grown dim as the seasons have come and gone. Many members of the tribe will rise in rank now that the Chiefs (seniors) have graduated. Next autumn when the leaves change color and fall from the trees, we will have a new crop of Tenderfoots (freshmen). However, for the braves who tended campfires, 1985 will always remains a special memory.

In the years to come, tribe members will continue to tell their young braves about "How, We Stacked Up!" in 1985.

We tribe historians of the Chieftain staff wish to thank Mr. James Spasoff, jr.; all of the personnel at the studio; and Mr. Steve Talsma, Newsfoto representative, for their assistance.
